SEVENTY YEARS A MUSICIAN.

Great-Grandfather Moore's Earliest Recollections of Brass Music.

New York Sun.

A quartet representing four generations of one family gave a private instrumental entertainment in Newark recently. Great-grandfather Philip Moore, eighty one years old, was the violoncellist, his son, Stephen Moore, aged fifty-two years, played on the clarinet, and Stephen Moore's son, William M. Moore, thirty-three years old, was second violinist, while Sadie, the ten-year-old daughter of the latter, used the first violin. She plays well on the piano, the violin and the parlor organ, and she also has a fine voice.

Her father is a fine tenor singer and performs on several instruments. He has appeared at concerts in the principal cities in the United States. His father, Stephen Moore, is a member of a local brass band and orchestra, and can play on almost any musical instrument.

Great-grandfather Moore has been a violoncellist for seventy years. Reed and brass instruments are also familiar to his hands. Rheumatism in his arms and legs has kept him from using the violoncello much during the past ten years. Despite the rheumatic pains, however, he played with his old rigor and spirit on the occasions referred to, which was the birthday of his wife. His friends declared that he had not been so spry in twenty years.

"I was born at Mount Cupid Farm in Somerset County, England, in the year 1800," said Great-grandfather Moore, "and I began to play on the violoncello and clarinet when a mere lad. The only brass instruments in a band in those days were a bugle, a trombone and two French horns. Two serpents, so called because of their curious, serpent-like shape, supplied the heavy bass, and the noise they made could be heard a mile away. Folk liked to hear serpents in those days. We had also drums, cymbals and claronets, the reed instruments being in the majority. Brass music had not been fully introduced from Germany at that time, even the crack military bands in London having only trumpets. French horns, trombones and an ophicleide, an instrument that had a loud tone, deep pitch and a compass of three octaves. I played the clarinet, trombone and basso in my band, and was violoncellist in the church choir in my native town for a number of years.

"In 1834 I came to America, and settled in Newark, which was a small town then. Some lads in the shoe factory where I worked got up a band, but none of them could read music until I taught them.

"Even as late as forty years ago I was the only person in Newark that could play the violoncello," said Mr. Moore, as he passed his trembling fingers over the strings of that instrument, "and when the churches began to want orchestral music I was in demand. Only a few churches had organs. William Combes, the choir leader in the Second Presbyterian Church, got permission from the pastor to introduce instrumental music, and he bought a violoncello for me in New York. He paid me $1 a week for playing at Saturday rehearsals and twice on Sun days. Many folks opposed the instrumental music. Mr. Coombes said to me, 'All you've got to do is to let the old fellow hear music for once in his life, and I will saw away on my violin until the old church rings.' Astonishment shone in every face in the congregation when the orchestra struck up, and Deacons David Doremus and David Brown, two of the oldest members, walked out in great indignation. One of them slipped on the sidewalk and sprained his ankle. He was laid up six weeks, during which time the orchestra won over the most of the congregation. But as soon as the injured deacon got out he called an indignation meeting in the church. The chair was occupied by the venerable and distinguished Mr. Frelinghuysen, who was liberal in his views. Some of the speakers said that they did not object to the big fiddle—meaning my violoncello—but they were decidedly opposed to the little fiddle, which they said was a wicked and sinful agent of the evil one in ruining the morals of the young in the seduction of dancing. After a long argument Mr. Frelinghuysen said: 'Oh, I don't see anything so very wicked in the little fiddle, for I've had many a harmless frolic with one in my time.' That settled the question, and the choir master won his point.

"A few years later I resigned from the choir to become sexton of Trinity Episcopal Church," the old musician added, as a smile played about his lips, "and then Deacons Doremus, Brown and John C. Pell, the original foes to instrumental music, offered me ten dollars each to stay in the choir. But I went to Trinity, where I was sexton for twenty-two years, and my daughter Hannah was the leading soprano. I played for the Handel and Haydn Society, which had an organ in the sessions room of the First Presbyterian Church. They played oratorios. Among the members were 'The Four Jims,' the best known male quartet in New Jersey. They were Jim Gamble, Jim Carter, Jim Ross and Jim Alden. Dan Condis was one of the active members. Many a night I played with the boys. A more perfectly balanced quartet I never heard. Lewis Marsh, organist at the Third Church, was a fine musician, and Mr. Pierson, the organist at Trinity, was another. Ex-governor Marcus L. Ward, and other leading men were married in Trinity while I was sexton, and the governor gave me the first fee I ever received for opening the church for a wedding. Twenty years ago I resigned the sextonship, and since that time I have not played in public on the violoncello. Once in a while when I think of 'Merrie England' I play an old tune for my wife and me, but that is all. I would like to go some night and hear the crack bands and orchestras in New York, but the rheumatism keeps me in the house. Seventy years of music is enough for one life."

DURING the temporary absence of Mrs. Daeres from her room at the corner of Second and Limestone streets a few days ago, a thief broke open the door of the apartment and carried away a half dozen sheets, a pair of comforts, a pair of blankets, and a new pair of shoes. The property has not been recovered.

Sales of Land.

The following changes in the ownership of land have been recorded at the office of the Clerk of the County Court since our last report:

J. J. Wood and wife and others to W. W. Ball, lots No. 70 and 71, and two fractional lots adjoining same in Chester. Consideration $125.
Lewis Collins' heirs and executors, to Kate C. Ross, house and lot on the North side of Third street, Maysville Ky. Consideration, $3,500.

NESBITT & McKRELL, proprietors of the cheap cash store on Sutton street, make use of our advertising columns to announce their Christmas offering to the public in the form of a sweeping reduction in a class of goods suited to this season. It is a bona fide offer, as all will find who go and investigate for themselves. The stock is all new, and of the best quality, and the styles the very latest. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

A Law Which Ought to be Enforced. The Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages Almost Wholly Disregarded—Are the Ministers and Physicians, or the County and State Officials to be Blamed for This?

In 1874 an act to provide for the registration of marriages, births, and deaths, was passed by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It was approved January 31st, 1874, and took effect from its passage. It reads as follows, to wit:

1st. be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That it shall be the duty of all clergymen or other persons, who shall hereafter celebrate or perform the marriage ceremony within this commonwealth, to keep a registry of all marriages celebrated by them, showing the names, ages, residence, and place of birth of the persons married, whether they were single or widowed, and the time of the marriage.

We will state here, before we go any further, that this act has since been repealed so far as it relates to clergymen of this state. The next section applies to the registration of births and deaths and is as follows, to wit:

2nd That it shall be the duty of all physicians, surgeons and midwives to keep a registry of all births and deaths at which they have professionally attended, showing in cases of births the time and place of birth, name of the father and maiden name of the mother, and their residence, sex and color of the child, together with its name, if it shall receive one, and whether it was born alive or dead; and in cases of death, showing the time, place, and cause of death, the name, age, sex, color, and condition (single, married, or widowed,) name and surname of parents, occupation, residence and place of birth of the deceased.

The act further says, that the above mentioned persons shall by the 10th of January in each year, deposit either the original registry or a copy thereof, in the office of the county clerks, which officer shall thereupon deliver copies of same to the county assessor.

It shall be the duty of the assessors while making their lists of taxable property to ascertain and record in a list separate from the list of taxable property, all the births, marriages and deaths that have happened prior to the 31st, of December, of the previous year. These lists shall be returned by the assessor—so reads the act to the county clerk who shall transmit the copies to the Auditor of public accounts, with the list of taxable property. From the copies so transmitted the auditor shall prepare and cause to be printed, in pamphlet form. Tabular statements containing in a condensed form, the information here-in regarded to be preserved and shall send from two to five copies of same to each of the county clerk's offices in this state, one of which shall be forever carefully kept in such office, remainder of said copies to be distributed for the use of the citizens. The lists above referred to shall also be carefully preserved in the county clerk's office. It shall be the duty of the Auditor to prepare blanks suitable for the above purposes. The act further says, that said lists of births &c., also the original tabular record, or duly certified copy of any birth, marriage &c., given and certified by the keeper of such record, shall be admitted and received in all the courts of this commonwealth as prima facie evidence of any such birth, death or marriage. It is hardly necessary to refer to the advantages the public will derive from the keeping of such records as these. But let any one enquire at the county clerks office and he will learn that the law has been wholly disregarded so far as Mason county is concerned. It is not our intention in publishing this article to charge any particular person, with neglect in the discharge of his duties, but simply to call attention to the law, and the fact that it is practically inoperative in this county. We do this with the hope that in future those whose duty it is to comply with its provisions will bear it in mind. And in connection therewith we will add that a failure to comply with the requirements of the law renders the offenders liable to a fine of not less than five nor more than twenty dollars.

Cleveland Girls Who Gamble.

Cleveland Leader.

"Talk about gambling!" said a young man well known in society. "The girls of this city are coming right along. I know five young ladies, three of them live on Prospect, one on Euclid, and the last on Clinton street, who can play just as hard games of poker, exercise as good judgment in betting cards, and understand the relative value of hands precisely as well as any five young men I could name."

"Are those the only ones you know of who wrestle with fortune?"

"No I know hundreds," replied the extravagant young man; "the ones I mentioned are the best, the most scientific players."

The reporter made inquiry, and found that gambling is more or less cultivated and practiced by the fair ones. The manner and freedom with which one beautiful little creature reeled off column after column of the rules and laws of poker, and the values of "pairs," triplets, "flushes," "a full house," "four of a kind," and, catching her breath, vouchsafed the statement, that "straights" don't count, would have done credit to Gen. Schenck.

One young lady took occasion to explain that they do not call it gambling, because the only game which prevails is one cent ante, and that the only reason they use money is because the game is so frightfully uninteresting unless there is a financial question, however small, involved. It was admitted that penny ante frequently resulted in temporary embarrassment, the informant herself knowing how it feels to "go broke." One devotee modestly proclaimed herself to be "way ahead of the game," and asserted that she had no end of handkerchiefs, gloves and perfumery, the result of her good judgment.

The best record, as near as could be ascertained, was made by a Woodland avenue girl, who realized between $11 and $12 from a party of friends.
